

THE OBSERVER FORUM

Wage distribution In the U.S. Is a crime

How can we call for affordable housing with-out recognizing the economic injustice of wage distribution?

The wealth gap has been growing since the late 70s and is supported by the so-called free market invisible hand guiding the economy. There is only hired lobbyists and funded politicians to craft legislation and tax policy that furthers their wealth.

Wage policies pay CEOs and executives based on market benchmarks while direct labor is paid based on the lowest rate possible to get needed help. There is little justification for fired CEOs walking away with millions after damaging the corporation.

- Tom E. Bowers, Charlotte